Thoreau said: "The mass of men lead lives of quiet desperation". Emerson said: "It is very hard to be simple enough to be good".

How does one, in our time, stop leading Thoreau's life of quiet desperation and begin Emerson's very hard task of being simple enough to be good? Anne Morrow Lindbergh's new book GIFT FROM THE SEA points the way. With deep sincerity and candor, Mrs. Lindbergh shares with us her answers to the challenges of today's life. Alone with her thoughts while vacationing by the sea, she reviews her own life as she sees it reflected in a series of shells.....each a gift from the sea, each standing as a symbol for various states and stages of human life.

"I began these pages for myself," she writes, "in order to think out my own particular pattern of living, my own individual balance of life, work and human relationships". She soon found, however, that many other women grappled with similar problems. This decided her to share with them the answers she had found for her own use. GIFT FROM THE SEA is Anne Lindbergh's first book in eleven years. It is available for only $2.75 at The Hampshire Bookshop.
